Dr. Elissa Ely is a nationally known psychiatrist and writer specializing in the severely mentally ill, homeless population. She will be joining us this week, and speaking to the entire community on Thursday, April 24 at 7:30 PM. Dr. Ely currently works at the Massachusetts Mental Health Center, and her works have frequently appeared in the New York Times, the Boston Globe, and on NPR. These deal predominantly with the severely mentally ill and homeless population.

Dr. Ely's visit is being sponsored through an endowed fund created in part with a gift from the Margaret Clark Morgan foundation to the Center for Literature, Medicine, and Biomedical Humanities.

Please encourage your students to attend this wonderful convocation. We believe her lecture will connect well with a number of departments including psychology, communication, literature and others.
