One of Hiram’s greatest treasures is the James H. Barrow Biological Field Station, a 550-acre ecologically diverse natural “classroom,” located just three miles from the main campus. As an active research and educational facility, the Field Station benefits students of all majors. It provides opportunities for students to increase their understanding and appreciation of nature through hands-on work.

Get your hands dirty working with the team in eco-management and land stewardship, animal care and wildlife rehabilitation, scientific research, or education and community outreach. Gain real life experience maintaining the different natural and semi-natural areas at the Field Station.

“Working as an intern in the grassland enhancement project has not only helped me gain valuable experience in the environmental field such as planting plugs and watering and identifying types of grasses including invasive species, it has also shown me the importance of each member’s role and teamwork.”

~Jacob Plisko ’23

Up for a longer trek? Head up to Michigan’s Upper Peninsula to see the Northwoods Field Station. Northwoods is in the heart of the Hiawatha National Forest and is minutes away from Lake Superior. There, students learn to live off of the grid in harmony with nature using a low-consumption lifestyle. This means using water from a hand pump, electricity through solar power, and hand-chopping wood for fires – all which make Northwoods unique.
INNOVATIVE APPROACHES

Hiram gives you the tools to succeed in college, in building your aspiring career, and in the personal life you dream of leading.

12+3 SEMESTER STRUCTURE
The Hiram Plan, our unique semester structure, is designed to give you the opportunity to gain valuable, intensive, real-world experiences. During the first 12 weeks of the semester, you’ll take a full course load of three or four classes. For the final three weeks, you’ll focus on a single, intensive course – in the classroom, in the field, or abroad.

EXPERIENTIAL LEARNING
Internships, research, and global understanding top the list of experiences employers desire for college graduates. That’s why all Hiram students are required to do one of the following as part of Hiram Connect:

- Complete a paid internship in an area of interest to you.
- Go on a study away or study abroad trip.
- Conduct independent research with a faculty member.
We realize that no two families are alike, and our Student Financial Services office is committed to helping students find the resources they need to pay for college. From institutional scholarships to study away scholarships and paid internships, we’re here to help.

“I’ve always known that I wanted to be a teacher and major in education. I didn’t always know I wanted to go to Hiram – I originally applied to many different colleges, but after my friend encouraged me to apply to Hiram, I toured campus and it felt like I was home. Everyone made me feel like I belonged, even from my first day. As I took classes, my professors helped me decide what direction to go in, which made me feel confident in my major choice. I’m excited to observe middle school classes off campus and grow as a person on campus!”
GARFIELD CENTER FOR PUBLIC LEADERSHIP
What is public leadership?
Find out at the Garfield Center. You will gain an understanding of foreign and domestic public policy, the American presidents, and the issues that shared their presidencies. Attend seminars, events, lectures by guest speakers, small group discussions, and study tours. Become part of the next generation of public servants and educators on relevant political issues.

ENTREPRENEURSHIP’S HIGH-PERFORMANCE PROGRAM
Get exposed to real companies with authentic issues. Learn how to analyze problems, decide on a course of action, and become a problem solver. You will develop effective communication skills, a strong work ethic, presentation skills, and the ability to work in a team. Be prepared to navigate the tough world of business and start a new career at a participating business.

ECLECTIC SCHOLARS
HONORS PROGRAM
Reach for new heights as an Eclectic Scholar; grow as a leader and prepare for the next steps in your career. Enrich yourself by holding a leadership position in a club or organization, working with a social service agency, participating in research, and more! As an Eclectic Scholar you will have priority registration, specific honors courses, and a housing learning community.

Since my first visit to Hiram, it was one of my top picks. I talked to professors and saw how much they cared about their students, which meant a lot to me. As a student, I asked my professor about extra projects I could do to earn Honors credit in my spelling and grammar class. After, we started talking about different short stories I wrote and ended up talking about our cats! I also really love the historic buildings. As an English major I spend a lot of time at Bonney Castle. The classrooms are so helpful for collaborative learning because we just sit around a table as if it’s a normal conversation and not a class.”
